HOW TO TAKE A 'TIME-OUT' WHEN ARGUING

Directions

If you are arguing with another person and you begin to accuse, criticize, or yell, then it is probably a time to take a "time-out." A time-out provides people with an opportunity to cool down, identify their feelings, and start to work productively towards solving a problem.

Recognizing the signs that you need a "time-out." Check off the statements that describe how you typically feel in an argument.
			Your fists are clenched.	□ Yes	□ No
Your face is flushed.	□ Yes	□ No
You start breathing fast.	□ Yes	□ No
You feel teary.	□ Yes	□ No
You feel like screaming or throwing something.	□ Yes	□ No
You feel out of control.	□ Yes	□ No
You feel that something really bad will happen.	□ Yes	□ No
What other signs tell you things have become too intense for you to have a productive interaction with another person: 2. Requesting a time out. You can say something like: "I'm too angry/upset to talk right now; I need to take a time-out. Please give me an hour to calm down and gather my thoughts." What are you must comfortable saying when you want a time-out?
			3. Relax and stay calm.
			There are many ways to relax and calm down, such	h as deep br	eathing, taking a walk, or listening to quiet music.
			What are some things other things you can do to ca	alm down?
4. Focus on what is important.
Think about why you are angry. Write down a pos	itive statem	ent that would help you resolve the problem.			